

Could you be a Design Review Panel Member?

Design Commission for Wales

Our vision is for a Wales that is a better place. We promote the importance of good design for the built environment, across sectors, by connecting the design disciplines. We collaborate with the decision makers that shape Wales, to help capture the public value of design excellence. We value openness, transparency and mutual respect in a culture where knowledge is shared with all our stakeholders.

The Commission is an expert public body, receiving funds from the Welsh Government for its activities. It is not a membership organisation or professional body, and does not represent the interests of any single profession.

Please visit the Design Commission's website for more information:

Design Review Panel Members

The Commission is seeking expressions of interest from professionals wishing to join its Panel to review development proposals. We review a wide variety of projects from individual dwellings to large-scale infrastructure schemes, which benefit from the multi-disciplinary nature of the panel and its varied expertise.

The term of appointment is two-year and members are not remunerated. However, relevant expenses incurred in carrying out duties associated with the position will be reimbursed. The time commitment required is approximately one day per month, however members will be expected to act as ambassadors for the Commission and its work. The panel is necessarily peripatetic covering the whole of Wales.

Applications are welcomed from all members of the design, development, environment and amenity professions and from those with appropriate design knowledge and expertise, who are eager to play their part in delivering a better quality environment.
